

Assignment-2

Daily Standup Meeting Script

Attendees:

John (Project Owner)

Jane (Scrum Master)

Alice (Developer)

Bob (Developer)

Charlie (Developer)

John: Good morning, team! Let's start our standup. Today, we'll talk about how we're doing with the smart task prioritization feature. Alice, could you start with your updates?

Alice: Sure. Yesterday, I worked on making tasks prioritize themselves. I had a bit of trouble fitting our new system with the old one, but I found a way to make them work together.

John: That's great progress, Alice. Bob, what's your update?

Bob: Yesterday, I focused on making it easy for users to change task priorities manually. I had some trouble making it simple without losing the flexibility users need. But after getting feedback from some people, I think we're on the right track.

John: Good work, Bob. Charlie, how's it going on your end?

Charlie: I've been working on making tasks prioritize themselves based on deadlines. The tricky part was handling different time zones, but I figured out a way to adjust deadlines based on where the user is.

John: Well done, Charlie. It sounds like we're all making progress, even if we're running into some bumps along the way. Remember, if you need help or run into any problems, let's talk about them sooner rather than later.

Jane: Absolutely, John. Let's keep up the good work and help each other out.

John: Thanks, Jane. Okay, everyone, let's keep pushing forward. If you need anything, just reach out. That's it for today's standup. Have a great day, team!

All: Thanks, John! You too!
